New Job for 'Chief'

by REESEY

Outgoing Editor-in-Chief April D. Stoops is leaving one "Chief" position for another as the new Chief of Police for the MWC College Police.

Stoops, an English major, plans to overhaul the present police department. "It will be an extremely difficult task, but I feel that I can succeed," she said. "Look at what I did with the Bullet staff this year."

The college police are overjoyed to have someone with Stoops' experience for the job. One police officer said, "I can't believe we actually got her. We were afraid that she would go into journalism, go to graduate school or worst of all, get married and we would not get the chance to work with her." (The police officer wished to remain anonymous.)

Members of The Bullet staff recall many late Sunday nights when they would come out of the production room to see Stoops gazing out onto campus walkway watching the police on their beat.

Newly elected Associate Editor Sam Leon said she once saw tears in Stoops eyes. "April wanted to work with the police after graduation, but she felt she was expected to go into journalism by friends, faculty and parents and this upset her very much."

Leon said that Stoops was having a difficult time making a decision concerning her career. "I told her to do what she felt was right for her," said Leon. "I knew that she really wanted the position [Chief of Police]."

Other members of the staff reiterated Leon's advice and encouraged Stoops to do what she really wanted. They all could see that she would not be happy if she was not Chief, so they took it upon themselves to get an application for the job for Stoops.

The staff members said they felt it would be a wonderful gesture if they could take care of the application process for their chief. "We thought 'Wouldn't it be great if we could get this job for April without her knowing it?'" said staff member Nancy Erps.

The staff completed all of the proper forms and submitted them to the secretary of the police who, according to Leon, was "simply thrilled" to receive Stoops' application.

Time passed and the staff remained quiet as Stoops pondered over her problem. No one said a word pertaining to the job, said Erps.

Finally, Stoops received word that she had been selected for the job. The staff recalled how Stoops jumped into the air and began to cry. She couldn't believe it, said outgoing News Editor Kirsten Brown. "I was so excited for her because I knew it was exactly what she wanted."

Stoops accepted the job on the condition that she would have complete control of the department. This was granted and Stoops is now on her way to a career with the college police.

Stoops wished to tell the student body that she was going to make many changes on the force next year. "I plan to enforce the policy of protection next year because I know that the department has been a bit lax in that department."

"I also plan to take away all pens and pencils from my policemen because I want them to spend more time on the beat instead of in their cars looking for people to whom they can give tickets," said Chief Stoops.

The inaugural ball honoring Stoops will be held during Dead Week and all are invited to attend.

The Bullet staff extends its best wishes to Stoops on her new endeavor.

No Co-ed At MWC Leads To Kinky Student Activities

by H.O. MOE

Mary Washington College is once again experiencing problems with its visitation policies and their effect on the dorms and the student body.

As you may remember, Mary Washington administrators were forced by certain religious influences from Fredericksburg to put a complete end to all visitation on campus.

The new rules included all co-ed dorms being reverted to single-sex dorms, no visitation, all single-sex classes and no fraternization between students of opposite sexes.

The final straw for the students was the decision to build a new library and a new student center for the females of the campus, to guarantee the no fraternization policy.

The problems started last week when many of the horny students on campus got together to try and determine a method for beating the system.

Those who attended the meetings began their program of civil disobedience by copulating under the front desks of each dorm. This became very "distracting" to the paid desk aides.

Said one desk aide, "How am I supposed to keep all the girls from going beyond the desk when there are two people humping at my feet?"

Not only is this organized action taking its toll on the campus, but many male students who are being denied access to females are resorting to sex among themselves.

Jefferson and Marshall have been the scenes of many all male orgies. According to Resident Directors (oh, excuse me, Resident Coordinators) there is nothing they can do to put an end to these sex parties.

Among the female dorms there have been no experiences of orgies or homosexual activities, but Spencers, at the Spotsylvania Mall has reported a drastic increase in the sale of vibrators, and the Physical Plants reports blown electrical fuses in Russell, Virginia, Randolph and Mason.

It seems that until Mary Washington decides to change their policies for the better of the students this bizarre sexual behavior will be a mainstay of MWC.

Requiem For a PIB

We at The Bull would like to express our sorrow over the loss of a beloved columnist and Head Resident Extrordinaire, Anne Lewis. Ms. Lewis this week was the victim of a terrible automobile accident.

Ms. Lewis, who often mentioned in her columns a penchant for dodging Ford trucks in front of the Post Office, miscalculated last Thursday night.

Ironically, Ms. Lewis, founder of the PIB (People In Black) was run down by a large white Ford, driven by Ernest Blanc of Fredericksburg.

Mr. Blanc told the police, "Well, for Ch-t sake, how the h-l was I supposed to see the little b-h if she was wearing all that g-mn black at night, and she was only two f---g feet tall."

Mr. Blanc was charged by Fredericksburg police with use of obscene language in public, no charges were filed in Ms. Lewis' demise.

Campus police have now asked that all PIBs wear bright orange reflectors and "hot dots" when out at night.

Commenting on the loss of Ms. Lewis, one Bull staffer said, "Anne always was an easy target."

In a tender moment of reflection Editor-in-Chief Teresa Curtis said, "Well, at least she dropped off her last column before she bit it."

Said Ms. Lewis' constant companion, Lolita, "Now I've got the room all to myself."

Senate Committee Announces New Parking Proposal

by IMA KUNFOOSED

After much deliberation and endless polling of the students, the Student Association Senate Ad-hoc Committee on Parking has come up with what Committee Chairperson Phil Schmidt says is a "whiz bang solution!"

"After a lot of polling and other methods we use to determine such things, we think we have found the absolute best solution to the problem of parking on Mary Washington's campus," said Schmidt.

The solution is a take off on double parking that is popular in many areas that have parallel spaces.

Schmidt explains, "At each parking area on campus we will place a crane with a giant electro-magnet. When the lot is full the crane will come into use. It will begin to stack the cars. We assume we can get at least four cars on each space."

The Administration has accepted the proposal on a trial basis. The parking lot next to Chandler will be used as the trial area for a period of one semester. If the new program is successful, all lots will be equipped with cranes and electro-magnets by the end of next semester.

Said Schmidt, "After tackling the alcohol problem on campus, I had to figure out another way to be interviewed by The Bull, so that I could get close to that Kirsten Brown. The parking problem seemed like an easy enough thing to tackle and it allowed me many chances to be interviewed."

The Chandler parking lot is the first to feature the new system.

President Anderson and Dean Beck are said to be very pleased with the new program, as is the BOV. Dean Malone has said, "Anything to make them forget about the RDs."

SA President Don Apparius said, "I would have taken care of the problem, but I was too busy single-handedly taking care of visitation on campus."

Once again a Senate Committee has solved a major problem on campus. Will it work? Only time will tell (but, don't bet on it!)

Three Seniors Dance to Success

by REESEY

Three seniors will not have to worry about getting jobs after graduation thanks to The Joffrey Ballet.

Seniors Kirsten Brown, Donna Craig and April Stoops were selected on Thursday, April 16 as prima donnas for the ballet company after auditioning for five consecutive hours.

Officials of the auditions commented on the caliber of excellence in all three dancers. "It was such a close audition that we could not decide which of the three to choose," said the official. "So we decided to go with all three of them."

All three women are leaving behind a career of journalism at The Bullet to pursue their careers in dance. Brown was the news editor, Craig was the associate editor and Stoops was the editor in chief of the staff.

All are following in the footsteps of the 1985-86 associate editor Laura Mason who began her ballet career after graduating from MWC.

Mason is no longer dancing because she received extensive injuries to both knees while performing for England's Prince Charles and Princess Diana.

Stoops has recently been named Chief of Police of the MWC College

Brown, Craig and Stoops performing in their audition for the Joffrey Ballet.

Police Department. She said that this would cause some conflicts with her participating in the ballet, but "I will hopefully be able to perform on the weekends," said Stoops.

There will also be some conflict with Brown's participation because she is planning to be married in June. She said she will have to make a decision as to whether she will continue with the ballet after the honeymoon.

"Luke may not want me to exert myself with the company, especially since we plan to continue with our honeymoon forever," Brown said.

Craig said she hopes that both Stoops and Brown do drop out of the company because that would enable her to be the "lone prima donna!"

The three women had practiced diligently in the Bullet office after midnight each night for the past three months in preparation for their audition. They decided to audition together to avoid conflict on the staff.

When they were all notified of their acceptance, the three jetted down campus walkway celebrating their victory.

The first stop for the company's tour is in Paris, France. Craig said that she was so excited to be going to France. She wondered if she would be allowed to dance atop the Eiffel Tower. "I have always dreamed of doing that! Doesn't that sound like the most wonderful thing to do?" said Craig.

Brown hopes that she will be able to continue with the company after the Paris stop because the second stop is in Las Vegas. Brown said that she has always wanted to be a Vegas showgirl and "I guess this is the closest I will ever get to being one, so I better be able to enjoy it," said Brown. "Luke will allow me to go, I'm sure!"

The transatlantic tour will end up at MWC at Klein Theatre in the spring of 1988. Tickets are on sale now for the dance concert of our very own MWC alumni.

There is a song in the musical Sunday In the Park With George called "Putting It Together." In the play it refers to paintings, on Barbara Steinsand's Broadway Album it referred to making an album, today it refers to putting together The Bull.

Many people have asked us, "How do you go about creating a parody of such a great newspaper, and in the process manage to insult every person on campus?"

The answer is rather complicated, but we will try to explain it to you, the reader.

First, we decide how many pages we want to do. Last year's was four, but this year we wanted to destroy more reputations than ever before, so we went to eight pages.

Next, we sift through boxes and boxes of old photographs looking for those pictures that portray the people of Mary Washington College in the best light.

Then comes "The Hit List," everyone on The Bull editorial staff has one of these lists, the people we most want to nail in this great newspaper.

Some lists contain the names of enemies, some friends, some professors, but mostly the lists contain the names of people who have in some way or another brought attention to themselves this year and deserve to be nailed.

Popular names on the lists are Don Appiarius, Anne Lewis, Barbara Anderson and Dean Malone. Joe Mancuso was added to everyone's lists when he said to us that he did not want his name mentioned in The Bull (Hi, Joel), because he's still mad about being on The Bullet's "Outs" list.

Also on our list are the departing members of The Bullet staff, April, Donna, Kirsten...Todd's safe because he's working on this paper.

After we have story ideas, and pictures (Many of you have Anne Lewis to thank for those), we sit down and create stories that only freshman can believe.

After writing and laying out the stories we bring the paper to The Free Lance Star, about a year later they bring it back and then the shit hits the fan!

Seriously, folks, none of what's inside this parody is supposed to be malicious or hurtful. It's all in fun, so enjoy!

The Return Of... Dotty Michaels

It's always been said that things come and go in cycles. Look at fashion—almost every style has had a renaissance of sorts. Paisley, fatigues, wide ties, short ties, etc.

Well, other things come and go in cycles and even though I haven't been heard from this year, it's time for The Return of Dotty Michaels.

For the most part, it's been pretty quiet and uneventful compared to the name change issue of last year (which I'd like to think I had a hand in keeping the name MARY WASHINGTON COLLEGE). However, a problem has been brewing which I think deserves my unique treatment.

This problem centers around a move in the Office of Residence Life (and possibly elsewhere). It seems that Assistant Dean of Residence Life Rhonda J. "Roni" Malone seeks a completely (save a few) new staff next year.

There seems to be a lot of speculation as to why she did this, so I guess a little more speculation won't hurt any.

Two thoughts that have been readily believed since "Roni" first came to MWC are that any Resident Director over the age of 35 is incapable and if you don't have a Master's Degree, you don't exist.

Well, it's taken almost 2 years, but she finally found a way to get rid of those she doesn't want without getting into trouble with some governmental agency or the law (you know how difficult it can be to discriminate against age).

She "fired" everyone and told them they would have to re-apply. What a novel idea. Now all she has to do is not hire back those she doesn't want. But to make it harder, Roni is opening applications to everyone—provided you have a Master's Degree or a year's experience.

Now what I want to know is—what's the hang-up about the Master's Degree? Is there something in that piece of paper and a $12,000 expenditure that makes one better than someone who has been here and in their job for ten years?

What would have been to Roni's advantage was perhaps best said in The Bullet last week. Scott Kaplan said that by not providing an in-house search, the RD's felt they were not wanted. What was also amazing was how damaging her own words sounded when seen in print. Perhaps the "out of context" excuse will suffice.

Mary Washington College provides some unique challenges to the rigid, pre-set ideas Roni has for the Residence Life Office. For instance, in the 2 years she has been here, she has yet to keep one Master's level person on the Residence Life Staff. There were 2 last year, but they both left and this year she doesn't seem pleased with the ones she hired. (A few are leaving for other reasons.) I know us girls are supposed to be fickle, but really!

At most schools, to keep a Master's level RD, there has to be more to those people than being "Dorm Mom" or "Dad." MWC is a friendly little state co-ed school that looks after its students with perhaps a little more care than the bigger schools.

Perhaps an apology to the staff would help. Then again it may be too late for that. Perhaps Dean Malone will realize that next year when she is still trying to hire people in August.

Freshman Seeks Good Time

To the Editor:

I am a freshman who decided to attend MWC because of its atmosphere and size. I assumed that the students would be a close-knit family and we would all have a good time together.

Boy, was I wrong! There seems to never be anything to do except go to a kegger—Ooops! a mixer or go to the Pub.

This is exceptionally exciting for those of us who are not old enough to drink. Did you ever stop to think how retarded the upperclassmen look while they are dancing around like they have no bones or muscles in their bodies? Well, from my point of view, these juniors and seniors look absolutely ridiculous.

I guess that they are having a good time, though. So, I really can't blame them for their actions. But, gee, it would really be nice if I could join in on some of their fun.

I tried that once. Of course, the night I tried to go through the beer line, I was stopped by one of the college police! I should have known that the night I decided to have a little bit of fun, they would decide to actually do their job.

Since the mixer scene was not for me, I decided to try the pub. Not a good choice. It seems that the only people who go there anymore are those who wear all black and have spiked hair or shaved heads. Not my idea of a good time.

Opinion

'Yes, I Know What's After Graduation'

As I was strolling down the pedestrian walk watching people beneath my black attire, black shades and black walkman, someone stopped me to exchange verbal communications. But instead of sharing something of herself with me or asking for my profound wisdom on a wide variety of topics; she asked me the dreaded question that I've warned all my readers never to ask: "What are you doing after graduation?"

But, instead of answering her with my usual response of, "I don't know. Got it, no big plans, clueless," I firmly stated, "Why yes as a matter of fact, I know exactly what I'm going to do after graduation."

Now, now, I know exactly what all you many readers are thinking: Anne Lewis will be the new mascot for B106. Or Anne Lewis has taken over Joe Mancuso's job. Or, Anne Lewis will be setting up leadership workshops to help others become the ultimate H.R. like myself.

Well your all wrong even though I've given each of these ideas a considerable amount of thought.

My vision was fulfilled one glorious day as I was listening to Dire Straits latest album, Brother in Arms, when the hit Money for Nothing, comprised of a coalition of melodic, harmonic, and biting guitar riffs, blasted from my Pioneer-Dolby Stereo speakers. In it Sting croons, "I want my... I want my MTV... I want my... I want my MTV...." As soon as the bombardment of the drums kicked in, I realized that, among the staggeringly high number of paths I could have chosen, I had found my one and only path in life—to be a M.T.V. VJ!!

I know what each and everyone of you readers are thinking too: "I could have told Anne Lewis that, she's absolutely perfect for the job!"

But, you must understand that I, Anne Lewis, and I, Anne Lewis, alone, had to make this decision—a decision that took a hell of a lot of soul searching. My life is no longer goal-less. Starting tomorrow, I'm packing up my car and heading to New York, or as Frank Sinatra would say, "The city that never sleeps."

Yes, tomorrow I'll hit the road promptly at 8:00. Be on I-95 by 8:15. Fill up my tank at 8:20. Hit the road again by 8:25. Stop at the Maryland House to relieve myself at 10:25. Smell the toxic waste of N.J. by 12:30. Pay a lot of tolls in between and arrive at my final destination by 2:30.

But before I leave, I have to take this time to thank a number of very special people who have helped me realize my vision in this crazy game we so aptly call life.

Mary Hart—The perky E.T. commentator who first informed me of Martha Quinn's resignation.

Martha Quinn—For resigning.

Sting—For his insightful lyrics.

Mark Knoepfler—For writing the song that contains Sting's insightful lyrics.

Moon Unit Zappa—For showing me that anyone can be a V.J.

Lolita—For being the best friend a girl a could ever have!

And last, but certainly not least, you, each and every one of you, my readers, who have helped me finally realize my vision in life. As Julie Andrews would say in The Sound of Music, "So long, farewell, aufwiedersehen and Good Bye."

Amerika II

As a communist operative, I have here compiled a list of issues to be used by our comrades to inspire dissent on the capitalist, imperialist university campuses of the True Evil Empire. These topics are guaranteed to mobilize students to the point of destabilizing the American educational system.

Long live the revolution. With the help of the American student, we may one day control the world.

Issue Number Two: VISITATION
Second only to alcohol, the issue of visitation is certain to bring about the voice of protest. Working through the American fundamentalist church, the communist front has already been able to incite near riots on the campuses. With regards to the way visitation policies have

Issue Number Three: PARKING
Distribute guns amongst the students and take away their automobile parking privileges. This shall bring on a certain revolution.

Issue Number Four: SCHOOL NAME

Any tampering with the school name or colors is bound to inspire dissent. This issue is especially important, because the administration's desire to change the name is purely in the interest of capitalist economics. By stopping a name change, we can win out over the marketing strategies of the capitalist pigs.

Issue Number Five: GREEK SOCIETIES

Certain students desire to establish secret fraternities outside of the school to serve as social organizations. If set up, these societies could be used to indoctrinate members of the college community to obey the authority of the brotherhood.

Issue Number Six: SEX

Mention "sex", and you will have an unrestrained riot on your hands. Sex is related to all of the above five issues.

At all costs, avoid using political issues to inspire dissent. The masses just don't care. Any issue of gravity whatsoever causes an immediate psychic numbing among the American population. All they want is their MTV (which by the way can be an excellent outlet for Big Brother).

Issue Number One: ALCOHOL

To truly drive an American student to the point of mindless rage against the authorities, work toward prohibition of all alcoholic beverages on campuses. One of the American students' favorite rituals is to drink until they vomit. The preferred way of doing this is by consuming large quantities of cheap, bad beer. If the American student is deprived of the opportunity to conduct this ritual, dissent is certain to follow. Alcohol is one of the few things for which the American student seems willing to risk his life.

And now they have decided to redecorate the Pub. Thanks to the art department for creating a "New" atmosphere. Personally, I like the old one. I don't get into modern or bizarre art. I also don't think that it's a good idea to have bands in the Pub that only a few people appreciate. It seems to me that the managers would rather have a majority of students enjoying themselves than a majority getting obnoxious and loud because they are bored!

Well, I guess I will have to learn to make my own fun. But hopefully, next year will bring with it many improvements.

Men's Lacrosse Devastates Georgetown 30-1

by KIM ZUMMO

Yes, they've done it again. For their 23rd consecutive win, the MWC men's lacrosse team destroyed visiting Georgetown University 30-1 last Saturday at Goolrick field.

This win enables the Eagles to advance to the National Division III competition held in Kalamazoo, Michigan in early May.

Coach Pete Ginnigar marveled at the team's outstanding performance this season, "I've never dreamed that the team would achieve such a high level of success in their first varsity season." "It's remarkable their talent just blows me away!" "And to think that most of the guys never even played lacrosse before this year—it's unbelievable."

The Hoyas scored the first goal of the game when goalie John "Blinky" Agnew failed to block the shot. He later commented on the missed goal, "I thought I'd give the guys a break and let them have one."

The Eagles then retaliated by tightening up their defense, holding the Hoyas scoreless for the remainder of the half. The Eagle's offense scored 17 goals to leave the Hoyas trailing 17-1 at the half.

In the second half Division I Georgetown was again held scoreless by the overpowering MWC defense. Outstanding defensive efforts were made by Pete Keyes, Mike Foor and Steve Mooney. The Eagles went on to add 13 more goals to take the win.

Coach Ginnigar cited "Blinky" Agnew for his fabulous performance as goal keeper. Agnew, an All-American lacrosse player, made a record 52 saves. Nearly every Eagle offensive player made 1 or more goals.

Several pro-scouts were in attendance at the game and seemed very interested in recruiting Seniors Todd Vecchio, Wynn Voecks, Mike Foor, John K. Agnew, John Raymond and Scott Bessette. Bessette and Vecchio are currently contemplating offers from the "Washington Wave" pro box lacrosse team.

The Eagles will host James Madison on Thursday in their final match-up of the season.

Scoreboard

The Men's Polo team defeated the visiting English Nutcrackers, led by Bonny Prince Charles, 13-2. The Prince, in reaction to the loss, threw what police described as, "One hell of a tantrum."

The Women's mudwrestling team soundly defeated the team from Sister Mary Elizabeth's Prep School for Future Nuns. The score was 15 matches to 2.

The Men's beercugging team grabbed a clear victory from Georgetown. It was a close match, but The Eagles beat the Georgetown team by a hearty 15 seconds.

The co-ed chess team won a very exciting match against Harvard. The final match pitting Eagles' team captain Scott Bashore against Harvard Muffy Pemberton came down to the wire as both players ran into time trouble, Bashore won the match with a dazzling QxK move that left the audience speechless.
